Description

A popular style during the Cold War era, this clock, reminiscent of a 1949 George Nelson Ball Wall clock signified the end of the war and the beginning of a great boom in America. It was considered radically modern - this Atomic Era inspired timepiece was the first clock not to have numbers on the face, a big departure from conventional clock design. Converted to a quartz movement, this is a fun clock sure to enhance any kitchen wall! - We are Time in Hand (Shipston) Ltd, established antique clock shop and restoration service for over 40 years based in the Cotswolds, England UK. All clocks are fully restored prior to delivery or collection. All clocks come with a 1 year guarantee. We can deliver and set up clocks in person (up to a 60 mile radius) - arrangement to be agreed with customer prior to visit. Courier delivery also possible. <https://www.timeinhand.co.uk>

The clock making family of Elliott were long established in London and the south, making clocks from the early 18th century until the final close of the factory in the 1990's. Arguably the last true English clockmaker, they made a wide range of mantel and grandmother clocks all of superb quality, and with the characteristic Elliot strong design of case and traditional dial. This example is typical of their timepiece range, with a well-proportioned Roman dial and engraved dial centre, and the solid mahogany case with simple mouldings. - We are Time in Hand (Shipston) Ltd, established antique clock shop and restoration service for over 40 years based in the Cotswolds, England UK. ## Description

French clockmakers in the nineteenth century hit upon the winning design of encapsulating a high quality striking movement in a case with brass panels, thereby allowing the quality of the detailed movement to be seen. This is a typical example of a clock of the period, with fine workmanship throughout and detailed design. It has a gong strike which sounds on the hour and half hour. It also retains its Swiss lever platform escapement. ## Description

---

Charles Shepherd is recorded as working in Leadenhall Street, London, in 1840 and this is typical of a high-quality clock made in the middle of the 19th century. Whereas most English dial wall clocks were made for industrial use, this clearly was exceptional in its' detailed quality throughout. Apart from the delightful open window to reveal the pendulum moving back and forth, the quality of the veneers and brass inlay are outstanding, along with the high-quality cast brass bezel and bevelled glass. Dial diameter 12 inches. - We are Time in Hand (Shipston) Ltd, established antique clock shop and restoration service for over 40 years based in the Cotswolds, England UK. ## Description

---

This quirky clock is sometimes described as a 'Tavern' or 'Act of Parliament' clock. It was traditionally a large clock, hung in inns or taverns in the United Kingdom beginning in the mid-18th Century. Such clocks were plain in design, the faces were around two to five feet in diameter and they were hung on the wall. Set in a rich, Tudor Oak case, it features a beautiful painted dial, with the date on the base of the dial. Height: 4 feet 7 inches. - We are Time in Hand (Shipston) Ltd, established antique clock shop and restoration service for over 40 years based in the Cotswolds, England UK. ## Description

---

This remarkable clock was made in 1871 by William Bailey, a famous maker of 'Turret' clocks. These were installed in churches and public buildings. It has no dial or hands as these were mounted on the outside of the building and lost when the clock was removed. Made with a very accurate escapement, fitted with a wooden pendulum and driven by two weights, this clock stands as a testament to the quality of Victorian horological engineering. ## Description

---

Figural Conical Pendulum Mystery Clock. Comprising a bronze coloured figure of a standing renaissance dancer, in his right hand he holds up the pendulum. Hanging from 3 chains, under a large silk thread suspension cluster is a silver luster sphere (silver plated) containing the spring driven time only movement with a conical platform at the top, a long stalactite post drops in the centre into the spinning horizontal bar at the top of the verge; the dial of the sphere has applied brass Roman hour numerals. The spring inside the movement drives the mystery escapement at the top as the conical bob hanging in the centre swings around clockwise. A very rare and unusual clock in good working condition. Diameter of base approximately 16.5cm. - We are Time in Hand (Shipston) Ltd, established antique clock shop and restoration service for over 40 years based in the Cotswolds, England UK.
